ST. LOUIS - Several groups gathered downtown Tuesday to speak out against President Donald Trump’s nomination of Judge Brett Kavanaugh to fill an upcoming vacancy on the US Supreme Court.

The event was held outside the Old Courthouse and organized by groups including NARAL Pro-Choice Missouri and the St. Louis branch of the National Council of Jewish Women.

Speakers were concerned that Kavanaugh would help overturn the landmark Roe v. Wade ruling and the Affordable Care Act. They called Kavanaugh a “partisan nominee” and “ultra-conservative.”
The groups said they’re calling on Missouri Senators Roy Blunt and Claire McCaskill to vote against Kavanaugh.
Trump considering two women for Supreme Court; will announce pick July 9

Governor Eric Greitens announces resignation, effective Friday
McCaskill’s campaign stop in St. Louis features potential presidential candidate

John Roberts played the long game. He just won.
Greitens invasion of privacy case continued to July 2

Lawyers in Greitens case await new possible indictment
Supreme Court Justice Anthony Kennedy to retire

St. Louis alderman take a stand on family separation at the border
Attorney in Greitens case to face more questions about mystery money

Woman threatening to cut judge’s throat ordered to receive psych exam
Attorney going after Gov. Greitens now says he knows source of mystery cash

St. Louis area to welcome new US citizens Monday